

VISUALLY EXPLORING CHANGE QUESTIONS

A change question is ambiguous.
Which questions lie underneath?

What is known? What is not?
Who are involved?

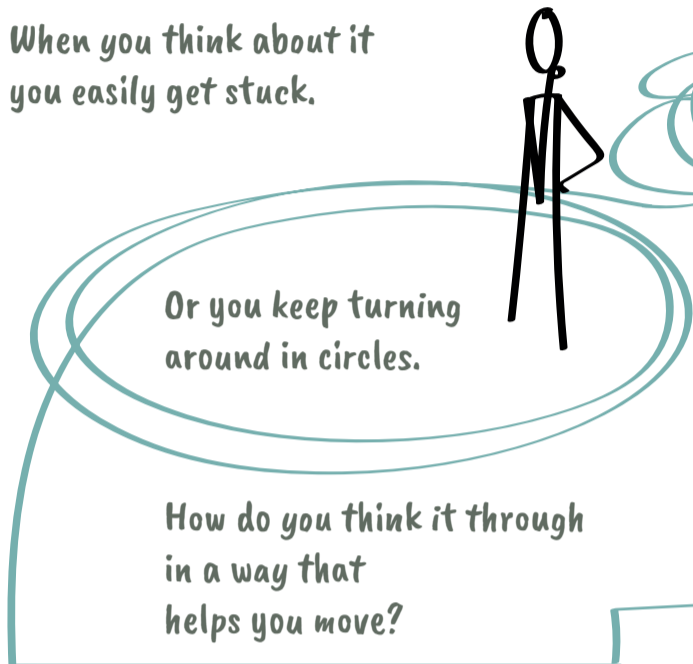

What is your own role?

When you think about it
you easily get stuck.

Thinking is something
you do with your head
and with your body.

In connection
with your environment
and with each other.

I help you to map out
your thinking.
To create room for
those interactions.

Kim van den Berg

THINKING in (inter)ACTION

A sheet of paper is a space

where you can explore
what is going on.

look at a question
without immediately
having to know the answer,

put different ideas
next to each other
without collision

map out
dilemma's,

seek connections and see the whole picture.

You get of view of how you look at a question and you see how you think.

When you map out the issue
in a different way
different thinking
lines come forward.

We sketch and iterate
towards a workable essence.

What is going on?
What does that mean to you?
What is needed?

Overseeing the whole
and your place in it
provides guidance.

That makes it easier
to make a move.

